The English suffered many difficulties and losses at the beginning of the war, but they came out of it victors. However, this victory did not improve the negative attitude of progressive people in England towards bourgeois ideology and culture, towards its social life and economic development. During the last decade of the 19th century and the first years of the 20th century three names were prominent among the among the writers who continued the traditions of critical realism. They were Galsworthy, Herbert G. Wells and the great playwright Bernard Shaw. All three possessed remarkable individual talent and developed critical realism along their own, individual lines. The 20th century literature is remarkable for a great diversity of artistic values and artistic methods. Following the rapid introduction of new modes of thought in natural science, sociology and psychology, literature has naturally reacted to absorb and transform this material into literally communication. Men-of-letters of different generations and aesthetic views were critical of the new era; they were spiritual explorers voicing their discontent with life. Their work became a new investment in the heritage of English realism and stimulated its further development. We find this brilliantly exemplified in the art of H.G.Wells, B. Shaw, J. Galsworthy, A. Bennet, J. Conrad, G. Green, W.S. Maugham, Ch.

Identify the main literary, cultural and historical currents in the English language. At the dawn of the 20th century, English was still recognizably a single homogeneous language, albeit one with a major distinctive variety, in North America, whose speakers now outnumbered those of its British parent. By the time the century came to an end, it had proliferated and diversified to such an extent that it was no longer realistic to talk of "the English language". There are now many Englishes. Circles of English. Category: 20th century. Queen Victoria died in January 1901, and Edward VII, the son of Queen Victoria ascended the throne. Edwardian Britain was a powerful and rich country, much of its wealth coming from business abroad. By that time, British money had been invested in many countries, and British banks and insurance companies had customers and did business all over the world, and, as the result, much of the policy and affairs concerning the Edwardian Britain at that time were the international ones. In 1902, when Germany, supported by the Triple Alliance, became extremely powerful and the English literature includes literature composed in English by writers not necessarily from England, but all are considered important writers in the history of English literature (for example, Robert Burns was Scottish, James Joyce was Irish, Joseph Conrad was Polish, Dylan Thomas was Welsh, Thomas Pynchon is American, V.S. Naipaul was born in Trinidad). In other words, English literature is as diverse as the varieties and dialects of English spoken around the world. Until the early 19th century literature from Britain will mainly be discussed; then America starts to produce major writers and w

The 20th century was a time of enormous technological and cultural changes, including two world wars and the Great Depression of the 1930s. The 1900s also saw the burgeoning of the silent movie industry (Georges Méliès' 400th film "A Trip to the Moon" was made in 1903) and the teddy bear. In 1908, there was a massive and mysterious explosion in Siberia called the Tunguska event, today generally thought to have been caused by an air burst from an asteroid. The 1910s. In the early 20th-century literary modernism developed in the English-speaking world due to a general sense of disillusionment with the Victorian era attitudes of certainty, conservatism, and belief in the idea of objective truth.[1] The movement was influenced by the ideas of Charles Darwin (1809–82) (On Origin of Species) (1859), Ernst Mach (1838–1916) It has been described by writer Colin Wilson as the "greatest novel of the twentieth century",[16] and was a central influence on C. S. Lewis's Space Trilogy. [17]. The most popular British writer of the early years of the 20th century was arguably Rudyard Kipling, a highly versatile writer of novels, short stories and poems, and to date the youngest ever recipient of the Nobel Prize for Literature (1907).
