Music of the Medieval Period was categorized into sacred and secular music. Sacred music was music that was used by the Roman Catholic Church and secular music was music that had no relation to the Church. Contents. 1 Sacred Music. Early organs are not like modern organs; though they were loud, they were much more difficult to operate and required a great deal of physical strength. Secular Music[edit]. Unlike sacred music, secular music had a more clearly defined beat and its texture was closer to homophony or polyphony. Books. Categories. Top. Topics. Music -- Europe History and criticism. Since all people of the world, including the most isolated tribal groups, have a form of music, it may be concluded that music is likely to have been present in the ancestral population prior to the dispersal of humans around the world. Consequently, the first music may have been invented in Africa and then evolved to become a fundamental constituent of human life, using various different materials
