Cicely Saunders. Dame Cicely Saunders devoted her life to making sure people could die with dignity and free from pain. Convinced the last days of a person's life could be made happy, she said: "You matter because you are you, and you matter to the last moment of your life." She came from a wealthy but unhappy home and, against her will, was educated at Roedean, the exclusive girls' school. The shy and gawky child left school with, as she put it, a "compassion for the underdog". She went to Oxford, but left to become a nurse. When a back injury forced her out of the profession, she retrained as a medical social worker. Cicely Saunders, founder of the modern Hospice Movement. by. Du Boulay, Shirley. Please make sure Cicely Saunders founded the modern hospice movement, to provide care for dying cancer patients, and established the first British hospice in 1963 (opened 1967). She realized that British doctors and hospitals were dedicated to attempting cures, and that patients who had no prospect of recovery were out of place in their hands. In the 1940s and 1950s, she was ahead of her time in recognizing the close connection between a patient's physical, emotional, and spiritual condition, and drew frequent connections between her medical work and her profound Christian faith. du Boulay, Shirley. Dame Cicely is recognised as the founder of the modern hospice movement and received many honours and awards for her work. She held more than 25 honorary degrees, from the UK and overseas. Dame Cicely Saunders died peacefully on Thursday 14 July 2005 at St Christopher's Hospice in south London, the world-famous hospice that she founded in the 1960s, and the birthplace of the modern hospice movement. A Service of Thanksgiving for the life of Dame Cicely Saunders was held at Westminster Abbey on 8 March 2006. Barbara Monroe, Chief Executive of St Christopher's Hospice, said, "Dame Cicely's vision and work has transformed the care of the dying and the practice of medicine in the UK and throughout the world. She is an inspiration to us all. The main message of the book is an integral part of my thinking: that receiving and being passive in life is as important as being active. Too often we think of the dependent – the unemployed, the disabled, and the sick – as not worthy because they aren't active. I am reminded of this as I am faced with the physical hampering of my disease, being confined to bed or a wheelchair, as well as the pain. Vanstone brings meaning to the status of dependency. The book is a meditation on the Garden of Gethsemane. Vanstone shows that Judas is active, handing over a passive Christ. He compares this with In 1967 Dame Cicely Saunders opened St. Christopher's Hospice in London to promote clinical innovation, education and research in the care of dying people. That humanitarian action launched what became the world-wide movement of palliative care. This book provides an insight into the establishment of the hospice movement and its development world-wide as recorded through the letters of its founder. The letters are split into three distinct periods, each linked with an essay by Professor David Clark. Cicely Saunders - Founder of the Hospice Movement. Selected Letters 1959-1999. David Clark.
