Description:

From the Inside Flap "Reading Jenkins' book is the next best thing to having actually walked along beside him." Associated Press

With his own feelings echoing the disillusionment of his whole generation, Peter Jenkins set out with his dog Cooper to walk across America and find out what his country was really about. Along the way, Jenkins' faith and pride in his country -- and himself -- were tested and ultimately restored. Yours will be too as you read his amazing story.

Coulson favored sandals during his 2011 walk across America. One of the more common questions a cross-country walker gets is: "How many shoes did you go through?" Right alongside that question is: "I couldn't do it. My feet couldn't take the abuse!" Well, it's true that most important pieces of equipment on a cross-country walk are the feet. Unlike a ripped tent, feet cannot be replaced. But the short answer, for most people, is: Yes, your feet can handle a walk across America, as long as you take care of them. And the earlier you start preparing your feet, the better. Of course, as with anything as strenuous as a 3000-mile hike, you should consult with your doctor before you even start thinking about the Long Walk.

A WALK ACROSS AMERICA SUMMARIES

Chapter 1: Talking by a Wood Stove In this chapter we get introduced to Peter Jenkins and get know what he is doing. It takes place sometime during Peter's journey. Tommy, Doc, and several other men in a country store in a giant blizzard first confront Peter. Tommy and the doc ask him what the devil he is doing hiking across America and Peter tells them that he is doing it to get to know the country. Tommy offers Peter to come to his house for some food, but Peter rejects. Peter calls for his dog Cooper. A thin farmer gives Peter five dollars in case he needed it.
