6. English language proficiency Social English Proficiency and academic English language proficiency are different terms. One student may be proficient in one vs. the other. The level of academic English may be based on a higher level of basic interpersonal communication skills (BICS). For example, a student may be able to orally recall the main events from their favorite movie but struggle to recall the main events that led up to the Civil War.

7. Language Assessments Find out how they assess how student's English language proficiency is assessed and what are the results of those assessments.

10. Collaborate Seek support from other teachers who also teach English learners. They can support in building content concepts. These are all vital for student success. Each strategy is accompanied by a definition, rationale, and step-by-step implementation instructions; and, all are specifically tied to the most current ELL standards. Included use of current Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) standards ensures future teachers learn strategies that support TESOL's three goals, nine standards, and three grade-level groupings

" supports teachers' documentation of standards-based planning and teaching, as well as monitoring and individualization of instruction for ELL. Organized into five sections which flow easily from theory a Fifty Strategies for Teaching English Language Learners by Adrienne L. Herrell and Michael Jordan, includes a rich assortment of practical strategies aligned to TESOL standards which have been field-tested in diverse classrooms.

It is key that in mainstream classrooms, teachers understand their role as language teachers," says Valentina Gonzalez, a district leader in Katy, Texas, suggesting that all teachers should be aware of the specialized idiom they work within.

"If we teach math, then we teach the language of mathematics. If we teach science, then we teach the language of science." Ferlazzo uses a strategy called "pre-view, view, review," which leverages a student's native language skills as a foundation for learning the new language.
