Lieutenant Ed Stovic, an F/A-18 pilot, is vectored to intercept Algerians who are defending their newly claimed two-hundred-mile territorial limit. The Shadows of Power - James W. Huston. PUBLISHER. Lieutenant Ed Stovic stared at his name on the flight schedule in his squadron's ready room aboard the USS Harry S. Truman. He was listed as the wingman for Commander Pete Bruno, the squadron commanding officer. Stovic hardly ever flew on Bruno's wing. His eye quickly scanned over to the mission's covert escort of an EP-3. The big slow EP-3 was to fly down the Mediterranean coast of Algeria and listen. shadows of power. Shadows of Power examines public policy and in particular, the communicative processes of policy and decision-making. It explores the important who, how and why issues of policy decisions. Who really takes the decisions? How are they arrived at and why were such processes used? What relations of power may be revealed between the various participants?Using stories from planning practices, this book shows that local planning decisions, particularly those which involve consideration of issues of 'public space' cannot be understood separately from the socially constructed, subjective terrain. Much of what they planned in 1988 is clearly in the works in 2016, and some has already been realized. Sadly, at this stage of the game the deck is stacked against the American people, and the CFR holds all the cards. The CFR, as detailed in this book, then, is clearly a dagger pointed at the heart of America. But, since its plans have not yet been fully realized, the book is just as timely today as it was when first published in 1988 and it's an even more important book
