RUTHLESS WORLD OF CORPORATE BANKING: A STUDY OF SELECTED THRILLER NOVELS OF RAVI SUBRAMANIAN

Introduction:

Cooperate sector is a part of economy concerned with the transaction of business. The sector constitutes the private, government and foreign sectors that make up the national economy. It has an important role to play in generation and diffusion of technology in the years to come. The growth of cooperate sector in India and its corresponding importance in the country's economic development may be analyzed and assessed from different angles. Business advisory service, company corporation, finance and banking, accounting and tax services, investment and stock exchange come under corporate sector. Naturally banking sector plays a vital role as a non-separable part of corporate sector.

The banking industry in India has a huge canvas of history which covers the traditional banking practices from time of Britishers to the reform period, nationalization to privatization of banks and now increasing numbers of foreign banks in India. However today bank sector faces major problems like privatization, competition to achieve targets, increasing working hours of employees, depression, unhealthy working atmosphere, frauds, politics, cybercrimes, financial crimes etc. Ravi Subramanian, a bank CEO as well as a thriller writer in banking sector depicts corporate thrillers in banking in his novels. Subramanian has written popular thrillers on banking and bankers, including award winning trilogy The Incredible Banker, The Bankster and Bankerupt.

Thriller is a broad genre of literature, film and television having numerous, often overlapping subgenres. Thrillers are characterized and defined by the moods they elicit; giving reviewers heightened feelings of suspense, excitement, surprise, anticipation and anxiety. Thrillers generally keep the audience on the edge of their seats as the plot builds towards a climax. The cover-up of important information is a common element in it. The author employs literary devices such as plot, twists and cliffhangers extensively for heightening the thriller effect. Thrillers usually have a villain-driven plot, whereby he or she presents obstacles that the protagonist must overcome. Thrillers provide a rich literary feast. Its subgenres are-legal thriller, spy thriller, medical thriller, romantic thriller, historical, political, high-tech, action-adventure thriller. The list goes on with new variations constantly being invented. In fact, this openness to expansion is one of the genre's most enduring characteristic feature. It gives variety of thrillers a common ground for intensity of emotions they create, particularly those of apprehension and exhilaration, of excitement and breathlessness, all designed to generate thrill.

Characteristics of Thriller Novels:

1. A protagonist shows both ordinary and heroic qualities like alertness, courage, determination, etc. and becomes psychologically stronger and braver towards the end of the novel. Whereas the antagonist reveals his darker psyche by being immoral.
2. The scenes contain conflict, tension, twists, surprise and multiple viewpoints.
3. The story narrates various points of view, including internal struggles of the protagonist, his will and interests, complexities and suspense in the novel.

Sub-Genres of Thriller Novels:

- 1) Action Thriller: It is more common in novels because of the visual appeal of explosions and violence.
- 2) Crime Thriller: It focuses the criminal's point of view. The physical action comprises of gathering evidence and discovery of the criminal.
- 3) Political Thriller: Political relations or the whole government is at stake and the protagonist is employed by the government to stop the decline. The protagonist comes from ordinary social background yet succeeds in attracting our attention towards the end of the novel.

- 4) Mystery Thriller: It includes both mystery and thrillers. It differs from a regular mystery by being much more fast-paced, with the protagonist on the run and the threat of another crime serving as the 'ticking clock'.
- 5) Spy Thriller: It is usually set against the backdrop of some war.
- 6) Supernatural Thriller: Elements are introduced usually as antagonistic force just as in the romantic thriller. Some characters may have supernatural abilities.
- 7) Financial Thriller: It includes some financial perspectives which make a thriller into a story.
- 8) Romantic Thriller: The plot line follows a typical thriller's tension, suspense and excitement but the main element is growing relationship between two leading characters.
- 9) Psychological Thriller: It includes a lot of mental conflicts rather than that of physical in this genre. The protagonist gets involved in a dangerous situation which threatens the social sanctity.

A Brief History of Thriller Novels:

Thrillers are characterized by suspense- a feeling of pleasurable fascination and excitement over what is to come next, mixed in with apprehension, anticipation and sometimes even fear. These feelings develop throughout the narrative from unpredictable events that make the reader think about certain character's action. The suspenseful feelings build climax that is sure to be memorable. The thriller genre has been keeping audience on their toes with tension and excitement for centuries.

Thrillers can be discovered in ancient epic poems too. Thought to be one of the earliest prototypes of the thriller genre, Homer's Odyssey uses similar technique as today's modern thrillers. A common convention within the thriller genre is a psycho-stalker storyline in Little Red Riding Hood. This European fairy tale can be traced back to the tenth century and tells the story of a little girl who walks through the woods to bring food to her sick grandmother. In the nineteenth century two separate German versions of this fairy tale were retold to the Brother's Grimm. Emergence of revenge thriller reflects in Alexandre Dumas' The Count of Monte Cristo (1844) and the plot revolves around the protagonist's daring, adventurous and revengeful actions. The protagonist Edmond Dantes, who is betrayed by his friends and wrongfully imprisoned finally takes revenge on them. The story is a quest for satisfaction, vengeance and peace. In the twentieth century came modern thrillers. Robert Erskine Childers' The Riddle of the Sands: A Record of Secret Service (1903) is an early example of spy fiction and espionage novel. Robert Ludlum's The Bourne Identity (1980) tells the story of Jason Bourne, a man who suffers from retrograde amnesia and must seek to discover his true identity. In recent years, we have seen titles from Vince Flynn as a political thriller novelist and an American author of thriller fiction Dan Brown's The Da Vinci Code (2003). The genre is developed remarkably over the years in many different places.

Thriller writing occupies an important place in Indian English literature as a broad genre. Indian thriller writing is woven around current issues like political, social, financial, corporate sector and day to day life of human beings. These issues are the reflection of Indian society. The Indian thriller novelists like: Ashwin Sanghi, Piyush Jha, Amish Tripathi, Reeti Gadekar, Madhumita Bhattacharya and Ravi Subramaniam have contributed significantly to the development of the genre through their writings.
