Theodor Herzl, Chaim Weizmann, and David Ben-Gurion at times disagreed -- even vehemently -- but each needed the other two in order to accomplish a common goal. A Promise Fulfilled shows how events built on one another -- how the way one crisis was handled influenced the way the next played out. It is essential reading, not just for understanding how the nation of Israel came to be, but for insight into the controversy and crises that surround this country even today. Product Identifiers. David Ben Gurion, the future founder of the State of Israel, and his entourage were in fact. determined, unlike their predecessors, to establish in Palestine a completely independent Jewish. society. This goal required the construction of a Jewish independent economic infrastructure, promoting the exclusive employment of Jewish labour in the colonies (Dieckhoff, 1999). In 1910 the Kibbutz became a "collective community"™ where the work was performed solely by. Jews.
