The First Epistle to the Corinthians, Revised Edition (The New International Commentary on the New Testament). Gordon D. Fee. 4.7 out of 5 stars 35.Â Paul Barnett has soaked himself in 2 Corinthians for more than 30 years. The commentary is not only the result of his keen mind and scholarly ability, it comes from his love for this great epistle. 2 Corinthians is a NT book that has many purple (oft-quoted) passages but is rarely studied as a whole. A lengthy defence of Paul's apostleship (marked not so much by success as by suffering, which Paul considers the true mark of apostleship), the letter and commentary make for essential reading for pastors, who often find their pastorships often under attack for the same reasons Paul had his a Pillar New Testament commentary (Grand Rapids, Mich. Nottingham, England: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Co. ; Apollos, 2010).220 Paul uses the Old Testament Scriptures as a source of authority in order to support the arguments he is attempting to convey to the Corinthians. For example, there are six references to the Scriptures, beginning at 1 Corinthians 1:19 and up to 3:20, which as discussed earlier, all refer in some manner to wisdom.Â In a similar way, from 1 Corinthians 15:27 to the end of the letter, the references to the Old Testament writings are all used to support what Paul is saying concerning a bodily resurrection. However, Paul can not be clearer about his intentional authoritative use of the Scriptures than what he is in chapter nine. Love. 1If I speak in the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am only a resounding gong or a clanging cymbal. 2If I have the gift of prophecy and can fathom all mysteries and all knowledge, and if I have a faith that can move mountains, but have not love, I am nothing. 3If I give all I possess to the poor and surrender my body to the flames,but have not love, I gain nothing. 4Love is patient, love is kind. It does not envy, it does not
