English as the World Language of Research and EducationEnglish is now considered to be the world language of science, technology, and education. In fact, it has become a lingua franca, that is a common language used for communication over areas where several languages have usually been spoken. Black Southern African writer Harry Mashabela, writing in 1975, puts it like this: learning and using English will not only give us the muchneeded unifying chord but will also land us into the exciting world of ideas; it will enable us to keep company with kings in the world of ideas and also make it possible for us to share the experiences of.
